Farewell...

To our longest ever serving Monarch:

Queen Elizabeth II was Monarch before your editor and most of you reading this were born. As many have already said she was a constant in an ever changing world.

The State Funeral was staged with a style few if any nations, even now, could manage. The massive crowds of almost entirely indigenous Britons were patient, calm and disciplined. As one would expect.

Britons Awake & Beware...

A new King and a new Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister is just an exchange. A puppet for a puppet.

Charles III is a Real Menace

Thus far his Public Relations team, especially the BBC and the rest of the Lying Press, have done a superb job in almost overnight reinventing Charles.

Cast your mind back just twenty five years to a time when the mob were baying for the blood of the Windsorite Royal family because of their 'disrespect' for the ghastly and dare I say "appalling", "People's Princess", (Tony Blair ex-PM coined that slush), Diana following her death in a Paris car crash.

Conspiracy theories abounded (still do) as did the vitriol thrown at HRH The Queen, Prince Philip and especially the then Prince of Wales, Charles. The MSM and many 'royalists' were demanding that Charles step down so that his son, William, could bypass a generation and become King.

How short are the memories of so many Britons...

Many racial nationalists have been cautious, to say the least, about the ascent of Charles III. Even THE TRADITIONAL BRITAIN GROUP saying, "...,we hope, perhaps against our own intuitions, to find in her successor a worthy representative,..."

To imagine or hope that at the age of 73 he will go from being an enthusiastic tool of the World Economic Forum and the likes of Klaus Shwab or the Climate Change Brigade to become a benign constitutional monarch is living in la la land.

The Coronation Ceremony of King Charles III will be a worldwide celebration of the Great Reset and a juggernaut of a propaganda exercise for all that we are NOT! Charles will willingly play his scripted part in all of that in what will be a barrage of symbolism and subliminal messages. Above all Diversity! Diversity! Diversity!

Obviously there will be a lot more on this to come and I would very much appreciate your input and feedback.

This issue has taken what seems an age to sort out. As my wonderful predecessor as Editor, Miss Rosine de Bounevialle was fond of telling me, usually when I had erred, "Colin, never apologise and never explain." What I will say is that I have been busy and it may not always be obvious!

Lately, 25th September, I attended and ran a stall at the first John Tyndall Memorial Meeting to be held in Preston for five years. A very good meeting and a big well done and thank you to Heritage & Destiny for organising the event. (Report in next issue of Candour).

Good News:
A. K. Chesterton's Portrait 'Back Home'

Recently I was reunited with the portrait of A.K. Chesterton.

For many years it had pride of place in the study of Miss Rosine de Bounevialle, my predecessor as Candour Editor, at her home Forest House in Hampshire. There it hung for decades near an open wood fire and since the theft and demolition of that fine lady's legacy to British racial nationalism it has spent time in a very damp caravan and a shed. (Thank you to Heather for rescuing it).

Painted by Richard Walker (Kingston School of Art), who was commissioned when only 19 for the work, it shows AK in his modest Croydon flat, which he shared with his wife Doris, in the last few months of his life. Signed and dated by Walker as 1973. AK (born 1st May 1899) died 16th August 1973 a month after he was found to have cancer of the pancreas. (AK was cremated).

Below: The photograph on the left shows the painting as it is in 2022 and on the right as it was in 1973. Quite a difference.

The painting WILL be fully restored, stretched and reframed. Help me to get that done for next year which will mark the 50th Anniversary of the death of AK Chesterton.

When fully restored the portrait will have pride of place in the new Candour office which is now carpeted (thanks to the Royal British Legion and SSAFA) and taking shape. Photos will appear soon.

2023 - A Year of Anniversaries

Sadly, and amazingly to me at least, next year will mark the 30th anniversary of the death of Ian Stuart Donaldson. Ian was the heart of the band Skrewdriver and it was he who formed BLOOD & HONOUR after quitting the National Front in disgust at his treatment by the mummy's boys who by 1986 had taken over. Fiore, Holland, Harrington, Griffin and Co.

A Look at Those Who Pretend to Rule Us: The Tory Very Odds & Sods

More Aliens Than a Star Trek Episode The Tory 'Leadership' Contest

The above bunch of swivel-eyed loons were what the Conservative Party scraped together from the bottom of a barrel of mediocrity and mendaciousness to find a replacement for the disgraced and outgoing British Prime Minister Alexander Boris de Pfeffel Johnson.

The contest has been greeted by a tsunami of apathy by the Great British Public who, for the most part, do appear to know that 'their' politicians are mere puppets.

The Conservatives can certainly give the Labour and Liberal Democrat Party's a lesson in 'diversity' of race if nothing else.

The Paedophile Blackmail Evil at the Heart of British Parliamentary Politics

Trevor Victor Norman Fortescue, CBE (1916-2008) known as Tim Fortescue was the Conservative Member of Parliament (MP) for Liverpool Garston from 1966 to 1974.

He worked as a whip* in Edward Heath's government between 1970 and 1973. In a 1995 BBC documentary, Westminster's Secret Service, (Photo: Right) he said, on screen, the following about what the Whips would do for MPs who were in danger of being mired in scandal:

"For anyone with any sense, who was in trouble, would come to the whips and tell them the truth, and say now, I'm in a jam, can you help? It might be debt, it might be... A scandal involving small boys, or any kind of scandal in which, erm er, a member seemed likely to be mixed up in, they'd come and ask if we could help and if we could, we did. And we would do everything we can because we would store up brownie points... and if I mean, that sounds a pretty, pretty nasty reason, but it's one of the reasons because if we could get a chap out of trouble then, he will do as we ask forever more."

The rest of us call it blackmail and protecting paedopfiles from justice. Sounds as though the perfect party MP is a pervert with disgusting secrets...

*A whip is an MP or (Lord) who, as part of a team, is responsible for other MPs attending Parliament and voting along party lines. Not only blackmail but also physical coercion is not unknown.

"Black Leather Mini-Skirt" & "High Heels"

Jamie Hamilton Wallis (39) has represented Bridgend in Wales since the 2019 general election.

At the time he was married with two daughters.

Described in some media reports as the first openly transgender MP in the House of Commons, following a statement in March 30, 2022 that "I'm trans. Or to be more accurate, I want to be". That day at PMQ's Boris Johnson said, "The whole house will have read the statement today from the honourable member for Bridgend. The whole house stands with you and we will give you the support you need to live freely, as yourself".

Fine words from a Prime Minister with a 'car crash' of a private life and appropriately...

...in July 2022 the Bridgend MP was found guilty of failing to stop, failing to report a road traffic collision and leaving a vehicle in a dangerous position after a crash in Llanblethian, South Wales in late 2021.

Wallis claimed that he crashed after swerving to avoid hitting a cat, hit a lampost and telegraph pole, before leaving the scene out of fear he would be "raped, killed or kidnapped" due to post-traumatic stress disorder which he developed after being raped in September.

A resident, Mr. Watson, who heard the smash went outside and looked inside the Mercedes E - Class saloon and saw "a white male wearing a white long-sleeve top which was tight to the body, a black leather PVC mini-skirt, tights, dark shoes with a high heel and a pearl necklace".

Wallis apparently phoned, and was collected by, his father who drove him away from the scene before the police arrived.

Wallis was disqualified from driving for just six months and fined £2,500.

The Conservative Party announced there would be no further action taken by them.

A Brief Look at Two GREAT BRITISH NATIONALISTS
By Tarka

Land & Nature
BLOOD AND SOIL

Jorian Jenks 1899 - 1963

Since Brexit, Britain is no longer tied to the EU Common Agriculture Policy, so food production can once again be in our own hands. This has caused the subject of 'Food Security' to be thrust to the fore. So what is 'Food Security'? Simply "Food security means that all people, at all times, have physical, social, and economic access to sufficient, safe, and nutritious food that meets their food preferences and dietary needs for an active and healthy life"(1). Not exactly rocket science but we have to go back to the 1930's and Jorian Edward Forwood Jenks, to find a British politician who actually investigated and wrote positively about 'Food Security'. Jenks, one of "our" intellectuals of yesteryear, took charge of the BUF's (2) Agricultural policy, with the aim of leading Britain to agricultural autarky (3).

Jorian Jenks, born Oxford 1899, was an English farmer, pioneer environmentalist, a founder of the Soil Association, "one of the most dominant figures in the development of the organic movement" (4) and, regarded by many, as a principle architect of the Green Movement in Britain. Educated at Harper Adams Agricultural College and Balliol College, Oxford, in the 1920's Jenks took over his own farm in Angmering, West Sussex. Unfortunately he was forced to give up farming due to the slump in agricultural prices and his own chronic asthma. From this point on Jenks was forced to rely on writing as his only source of income (5).

As BUF Agricultural advisor, Jenks called for import controls, the establishment of an Agricultural Land Bank in order to make farm debt more manageable, as well as an Agricultural Corporation to fix prices and fit in with the BUF corporatist economic policy. Landowners who were seen to be misusing their land would also be subject to compulsory purchase, with a Volunteer Land Army established to restore the reclaimed territory. Though Jenks' ideas were never put into practice, it has been argued that they did affect government thinking, as moves towards agricultural self-sufficiency became the cornerstone of policy in the late 1940's. Earlier initiatives such as the British Empire Economic Conference and the Import Duties Act 1932 also borrowed from Jenks' protectionist vision (6). Similarly the Defence Regulations included DR49 which allowed for compulsory land purchase, whilst the Agriculture Act 1947 allowed for price-fixing as Jenks had suggested (6).

Arrested and imprisoned under Defence Regulations 18B, Jenks was released in 1941 and became a tenant farmer in Seaford, East Sussex. After the war he sought to build a 'spiritual ecologism' "that would bond man and soil", and, at Rolf Gardiners' suggestion, he exchanged ideas with former NSDAP Agriculture Minister Walther Darré, who continued to write on the themes of Blood and Soil. Though the organic movement has in general moved away from his politics, Jenks' influence is still felt as his themes of sustainability, small farming, opposition to the over-reliance on mechanisation and mistrust of international food trade over local produce remain central.

So is Food Security possible in Britain? The answer must be yes. Equitable climate, wide variety of soils and an island surrounded by fish, with modern technology we can supply all the produce we need in abundance. What could stand in our way? Unfortunately the way our Country is governed. The Conservatives (7) care naught about Britain being self-sufficient. All they want is to earn a quick buck as a lobbyist and squirrel their ill gotten gains away in an off-shore bank account. If they can earn a second income advising an overseas food company, opening a few doors, then flooding our land with foreign food, forcing our Yeoman farmer into bankruptcy so be it. Any Tory worth his salt (imported of course) will have a pal who's a property developer, and can buy the empty farm and its land then make a fortune building, and selling on houses that no local can afford. Only a Nationalist Government can make this potentially wonderful country an autarky, only when International Finance no longer casts its malign shadow over our land will we be free to truly control our own destiny. We must never falter in our sacred quest, for one day our folk will open their eyes and see that Racial Nationalism is their future, their only future.

Henry Williamson 1895-1977

The author Henry Williamson is probably best known for his book Tarka the Otter: His Joyful Water-Life and Death in the Country of the Two Rivers, published in 1927, winner of the 'Hawthornden Prize' (1) a year later and never out of print in over 90 years. Williamson was born in Brockley, London (then a semi-rural area) on 1st December 1895, where he developed his love of nature, and nature writing. After serving with the British Army throughout the whole of the First World War, he was discharged on 19th September 1919, and in 1921 had moved to Skirr Cottage, Georgeham, Devon where he started researching for 'Tarka'. Williamson often claimed that he was inspired to write the book after rescuing and raising an otter cub, whether this is true or not what Tarka did was transform public attitudes towards otters, which previously had been generally regarded as vermin. Tarka the Otter is a favourite book of mine, and I would love to "wax lyrical" about it, but that is not the purpose of this short article.

Rather, I want to discuss Williamson's political awakening and beliefs. Like many who experienced the carnage of the "First Brother's War", described in his books The Wet Flanders Plain (1929) and The Patriot's Progress (1930), Williamson became disgusted with what he considered to be the pointlessness of the war, blaming its causation on greed and bigotry. He became determined that Germany and Britain should never go to war again. Williamson was also powerfully influenced by the camaraderie that he had experienced in the trenches, and what he saw as the bonds of kinship that existed between the ordinary British and German soldiers (2). To this end he visited the 1935 NSDAP Congress at Nurenberg, coming away with the opinion that Adolf Hitler was "essentially a good man who wanted only to build a new and better Germany" and wars were caused by "Jewish usurial moneyed interests" (3). (Visiting London in January 1944, he observed with satisfaction that the ugliness and immorality represented by its financial and banking sector had been "relieved a little by a catharsis of high explosive" and somewhat "purified by fire".) He was particularly impressed by the fitness and attitude of the Hitler Youth, compared with the "sickly" youth in England. In 1937 he joined Oswald Mosley's British Union of Fascists and National Socialists, the full name adopted after 1936. On the day of the British and French declaration of war (3rd September 1939), Williamson suggested to friends that he might fly to Germany to speak to Hitler to persuade him away from war. Following a meeting with Mosley later that day, however, he was dissuaded from his plan (3).

At the start of the "Second Brother's War", Williamson was, like many, detained under Defence Regulation 18B (4) but only briefly, being released after a weekend in police custody. The reason for this has been sited that "he wasn't guilty of anything". But this would have applied to the overwhelming majority of 18B detainees. His brevity of sentence may very likely have been because he had been gassed in June 1917 whilst transporting ammunition up to the front line, which obviously had a detrimental affect on his health and therefore he didn't constitute a physical threat. After the war, Williamson initially retained a close relationship with Mosley but refused the latters request to join the newly established Union Movement, suggesting to Mosley that he should instead join him in abandoning politics altogether. This led to a falling out. Nonetheless, Williamson still wrote for Mosley's theoretical journal The European until 1969.

Williamson carried on writing until he was diagnosed with senile dementia, which led to his death on 13 August 1977. He was working on a film script for Tarka the Otter in 1974, but at 400,000 words it was considered unsuitable. Unbeknown to him, filming went on and, narrated by Peter Ustinov, Tarka the Otter was released in 1979. Williamson never rejected his political beliefs, continuing to express admiration for Hitler and the Germany of the Third Reich. In his 1969 book The Gale of the World his main character, Phillip Maddison, questions the moral and legal validity of the Nurenberg Trials.

Henry Williamson was a prodigious author, regarded by many as Britain's finest nature writer ever, a soldier, a farmer, but, most importantly, one of our own. His legacy is maintained by The Henry Williamson Society - long may this continue.

The Roots of British Nationalism

By Andrew Brons

OUR DETRACTORS would like to portray us as a party devoid of native tradition — an aberrant and even alien cancer destructive of the wonderful and harmonious multi-racial materialism, the Establishment has so kindly created for us. Indeed, Racial Nationalism is not usually presented as an ideology at all but at best a set of outmoded 'prejudices' and at worst a sort of collective personality disorder or 'criminal super-ego' as neo-Freudian pseudo-psychologists would say. In fact, the roots of British Racial Nationalism are to be found in the political, economic and social statements, claims and actions of our own people through the centuries and in the deepest instincts of both our own people and humanity in general. History and science testify to the pedigree, rationality and endurance of our ideas.

Sociobiology has demonstrated that one of the deepest instincts in all human beings (and indeed in all animal life) is the desire to replicate and perpetuate their own genes or those most similar to their own — to ensure that they are survived by people of their own kind. It has demonstrated that racialism, far from being an aberration, is an instinct in all of us — whether we accept it and glory in it or try to repress it by layer upon layer of self-imposed guilt feelings.

That type of instinctive racialism has been seen in Europe since the dawn of recorded history. It served to defend the European heartlands from mass alien invasion centuries ago. There was the defeat of the Huns by the Franks, Alemanni and Romans in A.D. 451, the defeat of the Moors at Tours/Poitiers by Charles Martel in the year 732, the expulsion of the Moors from Spain in the Fifteenth Century and the turning back of the Turks from the gates of Vienna in 1683 by the heroic Polish King, John Sobieski. Had those defences failed, Europe might now be European neither racially nor culturally.

ALIEN INVASION

Britain itself has not been subject to that scale of alien invasion until this century but the various peoples who number amongst our ancestors (and it is now recognised that all of the British people can count all of the traditional inhabitants of these islands amongst their forebears) have tried to repel succeeding invaders who were seen to be culturally alien, even though they were certainly not racially alien. (Contrary to the myths of the multiracialists, the various peoples who together make up the British people were predominantly Northern European). They would include Cardoc/Caratacus; Boudicca; the Romanised Celts in the Fifth Century who tried to resist the Anglo-Saxons and perhaps inspired the Arthurian legends; the success of Alfred and the West Saxons in confining Guthrum and the Danes to the Northern and Eastern parts of England; Harold Godwinson's denial of the claims of Duke William and the Normans; Edward I who expelled the Jews and perhaps Llywelyn Ap Gruffydd and Robert Bruce who tried to expel Edward I from Wales and Scotland respectively!; and of course Elizabeth's defeat of the Armada. Even the ruling clique of Tories as well as Whigs who invited Dutch William to replace James in 1688 rationalised their actions to the ordinary people as a rejection of 'alien' Catholicism (a debate into which we will not step!), even though it resulted in the impositon of an alien-inspired financial oligarchy that rules to this day. Indeed in every subsequent conflict, including the wars of this century, the ordinary people have been mobilised (some would say manipulated) on the strength of a genuine racial nationalist desire to protect the homeland from invasion by 'foreigners' and 'alien' influences. The genuineness of our people's nationalism is not to be doubted even if those wars have left the country less free and more invaded by people who are infinitely more alien!

Our financial and industrial policies — to return the control of the money supply to the state from the hands of private financiers and to ensure that agricultural, industrial and commercial property are well-distributed amongst the people who work in them — are not simply an appendix to our racial and national policies. They complement and support those policies. In fact the country could not be sovereign if they were not implemented.

DISTRIBUTION OF PROPERTY

It would be dishonest to suggest that there was ever a 'Golden Age' in which the distribution of property was complete or even on the verge of being complete but the present all-but-complete dispossession of the vast majority of our people from any property in the concerns in which they work has certainly never been greater. Nevertheless, the accumulation of property in the hands of the few has been resisted through the ages by people whose instincts for economic and political freedom were the same as our own.

Those in the Nineteenth Century, like William Cobbett, who criticised the accumulation of land that resulted from the seizure of Church lands in the Fifteenth Century were not concerned with the privileges of the Church but with the effect of those accumulations on the remaining land in the hands of small holders. Cobbett pointed out that the accumulations in the Sixteenth Century led inexorably to the aptly-named Statute of Frauds in the Seventeenth Century, which provided for the dispossession of 'tenants-at-will' who did not have records of their holding in the manorial court.

William Cobbett

Cobbett was probably the most unambiguous precursor of Racial Nationalism. He was a patriot who supported his country in the war with France despite the fact that he was a political exile from it. He was a racialist who opposed the activities of the Jews and castigated those like Wilberforce who were more concerned with the interests of Black slaves abroad than White wage slaves at home. He was an economic radical who opposed the bankers' swindle and the wage slavery of the factory system. He was a ruralist who resisted the industrial encroachments on rural life and he was a 'distributist' before the word had even been coined. He was a democrat who fought to secure the political rights of ordinary people. A former soldier, he was a fierce advocate of soldiers rights — particularly against the brutal floggings they had to endure. He was a 'Tory Radical' — a contradiction in our day but in his it meant simply that he loved his country and his people — a Racial Nationalist born two hundred years before the National Front was formed!

William Cobbett

Later in the Century, the 'Back to the Land' movement was to be led by Ruskin, Morris, Carpenter and others. They advocated, and physically established, rural colonies of small-holders; others like Cecil Sharpe rediscovered folk song and dance.

Contemporary with the 'Back to the Land' movement were the mainstream socialists who were to found the Labour Representation Committee in 1900. However, most of them were neither Marxists like Benn and Livingstone nor Capitalist re-formers like Wilson and Callaghan. Socialists like Blatchford attacked Capitalism, not because industry and land were not in the hands of the state but because they were not in the hands of the great mass of the people — they were then as now dispos-sessed. One of the few early British socialists who was quite explicitly a Marxist was H.M. Hyndman but he was a most unorthodox member of that school. He made some very uncharitable remarks about the Jews and, unlike many other socialists, supported his country in the First World War.

The Labour Representation Committee was not the only movement to be formed at the turn of the century. In 1901 the British Brothers' League entered the political arena to resist Jewish immigration from Russia. However, instead of seeking an alliance with those who were seeking to combat the iniquities of Capitalism, it allowed itself to be too closely identified with Conservative MP's who paid lip service, but no more than lip service, to the control of alien immgration. By doing so they lost the initially massive support of racially-minded workers, including the Dockers' Union.

Later in the Twentieth Century, the mantle of Cobbett was to be worn by Gilbert and Cecil Chesterton and Hilaire Belloc. They, amongst others, coined the rather ugly term 'Distributism' to refer to their belief in the wide distribution of industrial, commercial and agricultural property among the people who work in those areas. They (particularly Belloc and Cecil Chesterton in the Eye Witness) also attacked the Judaeo-Financial clique that dominated not only this country but also the United States and later Bolshevik Russia. Gilbert Chesterton's special contribution was to argue extremely persuasively against those who would suggest that Nationalism was synonymous with Imperialism and that nationality was synonymous with imperial citizenship — something completely beyond the comprehension of modern jurists and politicians who seem to think that nationality (and not just citizenship) is created by accident of birth place and the reckless grant of a passport.

Gilbert (G.K.) Chesterton's cousin A.K. Chesterton, co-founder of the National Front in 1967, was a supporter of Sir Oswald Mosley until 1937 when he broke with him on account of Mosley's too close association with Italian Fascism and German National Socialism. Mosley was certainly a racialist despite his post-war protestations to the contrary and he was forthright in his condemnation of the fraudulent financial system and the power and influence of International Jewry (though not, he claimed, individual Jews). However, he did not venture any solution to the problem of Capitalism at home by any identification with Distributism, His adoption of Italian bus conductors' uniforms served only to give his movement a 'foreign' aspect that was, after the war, to be given further credence by his 'Europe a Nation' policy.

What then of National Socialism and Fascism themselves? To what extent are our roots to be found there? It is true that their nationalism sprang, in part, from the same instincts and traditions from which all European nationalism has sprung but they had essential differences that denied them the support of nationalists of other persuasions and from other countries. It is true that some strands of National Socialism, especially the ideas of Darre, Feder and the Strassers, not forgetting the 'Twenty-Five Principles', were similar to those of the Distributists and the Social Credit Movement. However, their anti-democratic stance, their agencies of repression and their territorial expansionism denied them the support of the Distributists (although Belloc did express support and admiration for Mussolini). It would be more correct to say that both of those idea-systems as well as modern Racial Nationalism are distinct heirs of an ancient European nationalist tradition and natural human instinct. However, the National Front has a lineage of its own in the political traditions if our own country - a lineage that we have been too slow to acknowledge and claim as our own. That omission' has allowed British Nationalism to be misdirected and misrepresented by friends and foes, alike. We are determined to make it good in the future.

OXBRIDGE*: "Why I Hate You"

By Michael Walker

 Oxbridge refers to both Oxford and Cambridge Universities

OXBRIDGE, you were once respected throughout the world and administered the largest empire in the world. The nation's battles were won, or so they tell us, on the playing fields of your private schools where the fagging system taught you how to treat the darkies and how to get by without women.

But Oxbridge, no-one respects you today. You assist in the creation of an Establishment that is vain without cause to be so, enthused with an insufferable self righteousness. In the civil service and the banking world you are now only avid for promotion, toadying before the God Money.

Oxbridge, I am ashamed that grown men in the Establishment, judges and policemen grovel before you. Whoever heard of an Oxbridge man "falling downstairs" whilst in police custody?

Oxbridge, what I hate about you is the way that you have turned socialism into a family feud between you and Daddy, made left-wing politics another of your "rags", and a game for wealthy diletantes who want to "show off to the proles".

Oxbridge, in your University Union you "deplore" outdated attitudes. When you walked in the halls of privileges in evening dress, there was a sort of appalling dignity about you; now you walk in the same halls dressed in Oxfam raincoats, you are merely loathsome.

In your rooms at Public School you stick up posters of Lenin and Marx, Martin Luther King and Malcom X.

SHAM

Oxbridge, I hate you because there is nothing true in you. You are a SHAM in everything you do, from the way you dress to the fashionable ideas you espouse. When you reach the position that Daddy always had ready for you (Patient Papa! He knew it was a phase, he loved you even when you had long hair, read Socialist Worker and called him a 'capitalist exploiter'.) as director of the firm, will you still have those posters in your room, still be "outrageous" in your politics?

Oxbridge, what I hate about you are the hundred thousand Flunkeys, who control Britain from their rat holes in the city of London and from their offices in Brussels, who live at company expense — the people's expense — who have never had to worry about getting a job but who have erected miles of grey corridors in our towns to intimidate those who do, who believe in private enterprise so long as the private enterprise is big enough but who tie up every small business and family concern in so many tonnes of bureaucratic terror on paper, that no-one dare start up a small business... unless he has a legal adviser, an accountant — the whole army of parasites of Oxbridge to assist him.

Oxbridge, I hate the way you condemn racism from the sanctuary of the country; work on property development schemes that have turned the centre of our cities into wastelands when you live yourself in the very finest houses, away from the mess you create.

The degenerate face of Oxbridge: multi-millionaire's son James Sainsbury. His snobbish ways and liberal attitudes make him unfit to lead the Britain of tomorrow.

CAREERISTS

Oxbridge, what I hate about you are the financial and political careerists who make a fortune out of milking the country, who think they are superior because they are on christian name terms with parvenu poets and carpet-bagging politicians, claiming to be 'well educated' but speaking an up-market journalese in accent sterilised sufficiently not to be too 'plum' but sufficiently 'plum' not to be provincial.

Oxbridge, what I hate about you is your complacency in a world for which you are supposed to be responsible, the sneering attitude of superior knowledge you put on towards every idea, every passion, every yearning that is unselfish. Oxbridge, do you care for anything at all other than personal aggrandisement?

Oxbridge, I hate you because you are never ashamed. Your very existence ought to make you blush.

Oxbridge, what I hate about you is your pseudo-intellectualism which hides a vacuity of thought. Oxbridge, there isn't an original idea in your head. The humblest Welsh sheep farmer understands life better than you, is more worthy of life than you are.

Oxbridge, what I hate about you is the way you bluff your way through life by remembering names, the names of the artists who are 'in', the swindlers and tricksters of 'modern art', the experts (your experts!) who act as guardians of taste for the nation, the illiterate and meaningless babble of the modern novel (printed by your publishers), the smug assumption that all is right in the world because all is right for you personally.

GANGRENOUS

Oxbridge, what I hate about you is the way that you think London is the centre of the world and deny your own origins. London, the centre of American rule over Europe, the gangrenous centre of the British nation, the home from home of the national and international parasites, the heart of the modern age, rotten with the pornographic self-indulgence of a corrupt and effete ruling class.

Oxbridge, I hate you because you are the stock exchange and the E.E.C. and the centre of every disruptive and corruptive force in the country; a hundred thousand rats gnawing at the national cheese.

Oxbridge, if you still had style or charm you might have an excuse. You have not and you fill me with nausea.

Oxbridge, you are no longer fit to lead this people, and you have no right to be the elite.

Oxbridge, you are not worthy of your inheritance. You are not worthy of the British people.

SOYLENT GREEN

(1973 US)

Starring Charlton Heston, Edward G. Robinson, Leigh Taylor-Young, Chuck Connors, Joseph Cotten.
Directed by Richard Fleisher.
I Hour 36 Mins.

SPOILER ALERT! Do NOT read the rest of this column but go straight to the next and find the film details and watch.

Scenario:

Set in 2022!

Come the day when old people with 'health conditions' opt for voluntary suicide at federally funded clinics so as not feel they are a drain on the economy and burden to the young. When there are people wearing masks everywhere, high inflation and food shortages. Desperate mobs on the streets herded by armoured police using tasers, gas and bulldozers.

The poor live in squalor, water is rationed, and they fight for a 'food' which is in the form of processed wafers. Soylent Red, Soylent Yellow and the latest product which is advertised as far more tasty and nutritious Soylent Green.

The film combines an old-fashioned detective investigation into the murder of a business executive of the Soylent Green Corporation which supposedly makes their 'food product' from the oceans. The Corporation controls the world's food supply and the access to all information.

Heston plays NYPD detective Thorn struggling to survive in a New York of 40 million. Edward G. Robinson, in his last role, is his aged "Book" or researcher and analyst.

In the luxury apartment of the murdered executive Thorn finds two volumes of a Soylent Oceanographic Report, 2015 - 2019. After analysis by him and his "Book" they discover that the report reveals the oceans are dying and can no longer produce the plankton from which Soylent Green is made. It is now made from the remains of the euthanized. They also discover that the executive's murder was ordered by his fellow board members who knew he was increasingly troubled by the truth and feared he might reveal their operation to the public.

Detective Thorn finds a way into the euthanasia centre and then hides in a truck transporting the bodies to a waste disposal plant where he witnesses human bodies being converted into Soylent Green. He is spotted and flees to a church where he is attacked by Soylent operatives. He kills them but is seriously wounded in the gun battle.

As paramedics tend to him he urges his police superior to spread the truth while shouting to the surrounding crowd,

"Soylent Green is people!"

The ultimate in recycling...

For years I have intended to revisit Soylent Green and I am grateful to Gordon Stridiron (See Letters page 11) for recently jogging my memory.

I found a very good, (in English!), version of the full film for free on youtube at:

archive.org/details/soylentgreen_ 201907

The 1973 film is very loosely based on Harry Harrison's 1968 novel Harry Harrison Make Room! Make Room! which was set in 1999. The film moved the year forward to 2022. This brings me back to a comment I made in Film Programme Notes in #878. Here I rephrase or expand it. We all know that anyone making a science fiction film purporting to show a possible future and tying themselves to a year maybe making a rod for their own backs. Far better perhaps to place it in 'the not so distant future'?

The duplicitous messaging of the Soylent Green Corporation is most evident when people choose to be euthanized. They are surrounded by giant TV screens and as their life ebbs away see a beautiful montage of waterfalls, deer and flowers - before their remains are loaded into dumpsters and taken to an anonymous industrial plant to be turned into wafers of Soylent Green.

The film makes valid points even if I do not buy into the Greenhouse Effect (remember that?) as Global Warming was called in the 1970's. (Scientists at the time were also warning of a coming ICE AGE). There is a fast opening abyss between haves and have-nots when it comes to food supply and access to decent quality food.

Very effective is the scene when Heston and Robinson 'feast' on a sliver of real meat and a lettuce leaf and then eat an apple, pips and all, with the solemnity of a banquet.

From DICTIONARY.COM

"Invoking Soylent Green is also a way to invoke the spectre of dystopia. Used this way it is shorthand for something that is perceived as undermining of liberty or otherwise unfair.

Alternately, it can be used as a tongue-in-cheek way to suggest that a meat product is, perhaps, not all it seems."

(These are Notes about films you may find of interest and not Reviews. Do you have favourite films and opinions about them you would like to share in Candour).

British Democrats Meeting in South London June 12th

Your Editor, Colin Todd, attended the British Democratic Party* meeting held in South London on June 12th. The gathering at a venue in a leafy suburb on a sunny Sunday afternoon was a much needed boost for British racial nationalism.

One of the first people I met on arrival was Derek Beackon and the first thing he said to me was "Colin, have you any copies of Candour?" I had some with me, maybe 15 -20 of #880 and some other recent issues with parts of the East London Rights for Whites 1990-94 series. Derek took the lot and began to circulate. I did the same sans Candour. Fifteen minutes later we met again. Derek handed me cash and said "Colin, you should have brought a lot more." Ouch... I will next time.

The first speaker was former member of the European Parliament and veteran nationalist Andrew Brons. Andrew studied at the University of York, is a retired lecturer and now a member of the British Democrats NEC and is the National Nominating Officer for the party.

Next up was Lawrence Rustem who served as an elected borough councillor (BNP) on Barking and Dagenham council in east London. Lawrence reiterated the vital importance of knocking on doors and speaking to the electorate during campaigns and of his passion for nationalism. In this May's local elections and standing for the BDP with a very short campaign Lawrence achieved 13.7% in Shepway South Ward, Maidstone, Kent.

Keynote speaker of the day was Dr Jim Lethwaite, Chairman of the British Democratic Party and a former Bradford city BNP councillor. Among other points he stressed the need for more young people in the movement.

There were certainly a lot of experienced folk in attendance, many at a nationalist meeting for the first time in years, and I sensed a general mood of quiet determination and dare I say rededication on the part of some. We must also always remember that for some attendees this may have been their first ever racial nationalist meeting. If so it was certainly a good one to be at as a starter. (I must also highly praise the super buffet spread that was laid on).

Videos of the meeting and speeches are available to watch on the British Democratic Party website as are other interviews and news of activities and forthcoming events at:

Dear Editor,

Hope you have kept well since I last wrote.

...even Covid is coming in second to the Ukraine with its 'minutes' to world war scenario and the re-run of the Iraq tragedy and its lies of WMD's.

The problem with Trump and Putin is that they stand in the way of the New World Order and therefore they have to go. The American dominated NATO is dragging us all in to foreign wars even though the Warsaw Pact was disbanded decades ago. Any alliance with the US with its military bases in 87 countries and a disastrous Middle East policy and a love of bombing countries should be avoided.

There is very little to cheer up patriots. The radio is full of yuk stories about racism, lefty feminists, white cultural nastiness and homo stuff along with the sob stories about the Channel boat people. It just never ends. There was an interview with a Black American professor the other day and he prattled on about the "third wave of whiteness" and how he is now on his way to a South East Asian country that I had never heard of to investigate "cultural racism." It appears that no pip squeak third world country is to sneak through the net.

It is terrible that there is nothing for people to turn to when the system turns on them...

...Perhaps nationalism needs a makeover where more current issues get aired...

The biggest problem is the numbers and no one talks about it. At the time of the Battle of Hastings our population was around three million.

A few weeks ago (on TV) there was heartbreaking and shocking footage of an elephant herd feeding on a rubbish dump in Sri Lanka another shocker was a photograph of a floating plastic bag seven miles down in the Mariano Trench in the Pacific.

It all reminds me of a futuristic Charlton Heston film I saw many years ago called Soylent Green which showed the horrible results of an overpopulated world...

Sorry about all the grouching. At times I just get fed up with too many obituaries and a future of 0.8 to 1.2 of the electoral vote with what patriots do these days.

Gordon Stridiron
South Tyneside

Editor: I cut Gordon's letter a bit. As ever he makes valid points and raises important questions.

Population. This is a subject most racial nationalists are avoiding or even deliberately misunderstanding. I do not have in mind a Bill Gates type programme of mass mystery vaccinations. For me 5-10 million in the British Isles in a rural/techno society sounds fine. That is my dream vision of a techno-rural future but is discussion of this subject taboo? Population of our small islands is now, apparently 70+ million. Your thoughts readers please!

Soylent Green. I do know the film and it will feature in my next Film Programme Notes.

Dear Editor,

Your blog headline of July 11th More Aliens Than a Star Trek Episode: The Tory 'Leadership Contest was absolutely brilliant. We have to drag "nationalists" (I use the word in its broadest sense) from believing still that the Conservatives are in any way "patriotic". This is another Candour step in the right direction.

Paul
Surrey

Editor: Obviously anyone with genuine racial sensibilities left the Conservative party decades ago. Leaving the self-delusional aging cowards of the 'Shires', the old Etonians, lawyers, greasy chancers of various ethnicities with City and other dodgy "bithineth" backgrounds.

You are quite right Paul in pointing out that many somehow still see the Tories as somehow a 'patriotic' party that will do 'something' about immigration. That is WILFUL IGNORANCE and no defence!

There are weapons we can use against the Conservatives. Facts, revulsion and ridicule. Often best combined.

There are even some I hear who seem to believe that the opposition Labour Party, led by that calloused of hand former head of the Crown Prosecution Service, Sir Keir Rodney Starmer KCB QC MP in some way represent the working man.

Dear Editor,

It seems we no longer exist according to Wikipedia, the Marxist Liberal controlled free encyclopedia:

"Caucasian race

The Caucasian race (also Caucasoid or Europid) is an obsolete racial classification of human beings based on a now-disproven theory of biological race. The Caucasian race was historically regarded as a biological taxon which, depending on which of the historical race classifications was being used, usually included ancient and modern populations from all or parts of Europe, Western Asia, Central Asia, South Asia, North Africa , and the Horn of Africa."

I do believe this is wishful thinking on the part of our enemies. No more Battles of Berlin! On to Total Victory!

HIGHLY RECOMMENDED BOOKS FOR ALL RACIAL PATRIOTS
WE ARE THE PUBLISHERS!

The History of the League of Empire Loyalists and Candour
By Hugh McNeile and Rob Black

In the twelve years of its existence, the League of Empire Loyalists became almost a national institution.

Expounding a dynamic creed of patriotism, it attracted a modest but world-wide following, and at its peak managed to force its way into the headlines of the world's press with demonstrations more original and attractive than those of any other organisation of the time - an achievement, which has not been matched since.

The following is from an online review from a reader in the USA "...tells the delightful story of the LEL, who fought a rear guard action to maintain the British Empire in the 1950s and 60s. Eventually their focus turned to non - white immigration and they merged into the national Front. It is a sorry testimony as to how far European man has fallen that an organisation first dedicated to maintaining white rule in places like Kenya and Rhodesia morphed very quickly into one simply devoted to preventing a non-white... Take over of England. Yet, their courage and good cheer remains an inspiring tale. Should the de-Europeanization of Europe ever be halted or even if our history is to be told in the catacombs the likes of the LEL will be remembered with fond respect."

150 pages. Rare photographs. Paperback £12.00. Hardback with DJ £22.00.

The Candour A.B.C. of Politics
By Rosine de Bounevialle

The Candour A.B.C. Of Politics was originally serialised in Candour between August 1989 and August 1995. It was always intended to publish in book form the text that our late editor Miss Rosine Maria de Bounevialle referred to as her "only literary baby" but it was not to be in her lifetime.

The book is an idiosyncratic and wonderful testament of her values.

So much wisdom, knowledge and razor sharp observation must be in the hands of as many as possible. First published by us in 2016 one hundred years after her birth it is fitting that such an influential and elemental force be much more widely remembered and recognised.

To capture a moment of Rosine around 1990 this is from the ABC.

"I loved her library. Full of marvellous books. Her desk was always invaded by masses of papers and Aeneas the cat that was wished on her. She gave me books which I keep preciously.

She was beautiful and elegant. Physically and spiritually. Dynamic, strong, straight and devoted to her ideals. Devoted to her friends. To Colin whom she loved like her son.

Telling It The Way It Really Is Or Was...

If you, like I, remember the Ladybird books from your childhood as part of learning to read some of the fake covers such as the one (left) may amuse you.
The original books helped us to read and they contained healthy messages which showed normal white children with their families and people working at real and useful and productive jobs.
Look at the originals and then follow the degenerative 'progress' of the Ladybird books over the decades to see how fast the face of Great Britain has been corrupted since 1948.
Now they are Marxist Liberal handbooks pure and simple.
The more recent and 'serious' Ladybird Expert series includes Climate Change by the Prince of Wales! (See Editorial this issue!)

Cultural Appropriation

I was in a fair mood after visiting a charity shop recently and picking up a mint paperback for 50p of The Hobbit which I have intended to reread for ages. From there to the newsagent and I am hit in the face by the front cover of the 16th August, BBC magazine Radio Times. A full photo of the apparently ennobled, black, alleged comedian Lenny Henry as a hobbit!
It seems a prequel to The Hobbit has been made. A lovely BBC diverse one. What then happened to the non-white Hobbits in the books and films that followed? Were they repatriated from the Shire by fascist Hobbits? Will the BBC tell us?

CANDOUR SALUTES RECENTLY FALLEN COMRADES

RANDY WEAVER
(1948 - 2022)

Randy Weaver became a reluctant anti-Federalist folk hero. A survivalist, former Iowa factory worker and Green Beret he was a central participant in the 1992 Ruby Ridge standoff (a setup staged after he refused to become an FBI snitch) that resulted in the murders of his wife, Vicki, and son Sam after one of their dogs, Striker (also killed), found a nest of six armed US Marshalls hiding on their land. What followed was an 11 day siege nightmare by hundreds of federal agent stooges.
There is a LOT available on the internet about Randy Weaver and Ruby Ridge including a full free made for TV series starring Randy Quaid. Be selective.

KeepTalking
Critical thinking and open discussion
KeepTalking is run by Ian and Nick and they have been running the group since 2011. Talks are held at various venues in London. (I believe they now have a very good regular meeting place).
Keep Talking 911 was set up to keep the discussion going about the global implications of the Twin Towers and Building 7 event on 11th September 2001. The world was never to be the same again.
Since 2011 there have been talks on a very wide range of subjects from Moon Landings, who wrote Shakespeare to the Monetary system.
A very educated and friendly crowd attend the monthly meetings and I would urge all Candour people in the Greater London or Home Counties areas to make the effort to attend.
